

THE LOUISVILLE DAILY JOURNAL.

VOLUME XXXII.

LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 4, 1862.

NUMBER 158.

LOUISVILLE JOURNAL

POLICE PR. CEDINGS.—Tuesday, June 3.—Conrad Shaffer, drunk and disorderly. Bail in $200 for six months.

John M. Dunn was bailed out of the Workhouse.

John Kiney and Mike Ford, drunk and disorderly. Bail of each in $200 for two months.

Frank McDonald, drunk and disorderly conduct. Discharged.

Samuel White and M. Daffaughen, passing a $10 counterfeit note to Isaac Melius. Discharged.

Henry Stevens, a slave, assault on Geo. Smith, a slave. Ordered to receive 20 stripes.

Eugene Martin, stealing $55 from Nicholas Bartsch. Continued.

Hix, J. E. BOULIGNY.—This gentleman, a member of Congress for New Orleans, who talked and voted for Union to the last in the House of Representatives, and has always boldly avowed, and sadly suffered for, his unchanged opinions in that city, arrived at New York in the steamer Matanzas on Thursday. Mr. Boulingy fought several duels in vindication of his sentiments, and it is said was attacked and nearly killed on the 1st of May. His health is somewhat impaired from wounds received in those encounters. When Mr. Boulingy's arrival became known, a number of gentlemen determined to express their admiration of his gallant conduct by a serenade at his hotel (the Fifth Avenue) on Thursday evening, but he was compelled to withdraw on public business on Friday.

THE OLD NORTH STATE.—North Carolina is beyond all doubt anxious to resume its connection with the old Union. Copies of the Newbern Pro- gress contain extracts from Raleigh newspapers and details of the proceedings in the convention now sitting, which prove that a quite effective rebellion against the rebellion is in progress. The convention has instructed the Governor to dismiss all soldiers from service over thirty-five years of age, an act proposed by Kenneth Raynor punishing sedition and rebellion against the Confederate Government was voted down by a large majority; H. W. Wilson's bill has been put forward as a candidate for Governor in that state which shows that he and his friends at Washington are openly fighting the secessionists. In addition to this Union meetings are being held in various parts of the State, and home guards organized to keep down the local secessionists.

EMANCIPATION OF SLAVES IN THE DUTCH COUNTRIES.—All slaves in the Dutch West India Colonies will be set free on the 1st of July, 1863, under the following conditions: The compensation of three hundred guilders is to be paid to the owner of each slave—whether man, woman, or child—and the slave is then to remain under an apprenticeship for a term of three years, during which time he is to be paid wages for his work, half of such wages to accrue to the Government. The Dutch Government will grant two millions of guilders per annum for emigration. The Dutch possessions in America are Guiana, St. Eustatius, Curacao, St. Martin, and Saba. Guiana contains a population of fifteen thousand souls and thirty-seven thousand five hundred blacks. St. Eustatius, a leeward island, has five thousand whites and twenty thousand blacks.

Mr. Solomon Sturgis, the banker of Chicago, has been pronounced insane. His son, George Sturgis, had, in a petition in the Circuit Court of Cook county, setting forth his insanity and requesting that a juris ducatur inquirendo be summoned to determine the question. This was accordingly done, and the slave was exonerated.

Mr. Sturgis has been appointed to take charge of his property.

A LIBERAL OFFERING TO THE POPE.—The offerings of the Catholics of the Diocese of New York to the Pope in August, 1860, amounted to $55,000. The Metropolitan Archbishop: "It will be gratifying to all who are moved by a sense of justice that the sum will be used to ransom the slaves."

Major General Wool has awarded the contract for raising and saving the remains of the Merrimac, as well as all other wrecks in Norfolk harbor, to Mr. Sanborn, the present agent of the Adams Express Company for the Army of the Potomac. Measures will be taken at once to commence on the Merrimac.

PROPOSALS FOR BEER CATTLE.—The proposals for 6,000 beef cattle, advertised for by Major Backwith of the Subsistence Department, were opened in Washington on Tuesday. There were fifteen bids, ranging from $135 to $228. The contract will be awarded to Peper & Watson, at the former figure, or to Thomas Walker at $223.

The RED RIVER TREATY.—The St. Cloud Democrat learns that Senator Rice, on the part of the Government, is expected to negotiate with the Chippewa Indians of Red River, for which $15,000 has been provided, in the Indian appropriation bill.

The Great Western and Grand Trunk rail-ways of Canada have united.

THE LEAK IN HALLER'S ARMY.—It is now well understood that "unauthorized banters" were excluded from the army of Tennessee by Gen. Halleck because the rebels managed to obtain intelligence of the disposition of our forces through some one with the army. The leaky individual, according to the correspondence of the Cincinnati Times, is a brother of Gov. Yates of Illinois. The rebel agents were two fascinating sisters named Irwin, whose father owns a large amount of broad cloth and almost countless contrabands, and who have the enviable reputation of being the "most elegant ladies in Tennessee," reside at Savannah, and since the occupation of the place they have professed strong Union sentiments, and their parlor has been a general rendezvous for all the young gallants in the service. The correspondence says:

"In the mean time the 'erring brother' found the means of visiting his 'loyal sisters' nightly, and what they learned during a day was known to Beaufort before a second day had passed."

He was soon discovered, and that was a leaky secret.

The present duty of the Government is "subjugation, confiniment, and emancipation."

To accomplish these objects we should consider the Constitution again till the close of the war, and then we should have a more consistent Government and a standing army of occupation.

Business in LOUISIANA.—A correspondent writing from New Orleans says:

"I have had the cold blooded assassination of two of our men near Terrebonne Station sixteen days ago. A detachment of rebels, a party of cotton dealers, and all had gone aboard with the exception of one who was returning to Terrebonne Station in the boat which he had left. He was captured, and from that moment his attention was to both in general, and in particular, he became unfeeling, and the consideration he received, which he had given to his wife, his brother, and his own personal friends, led him to an indiscreet, not to say criminal, revelation of his secret plans of future career, and the strength of the party he was with. He was reported as a vain man, and flattery rendered his leaguers, until the whole story was known to the public."

In the mean time the "erring brother" found the means of visiting his "loyal sisters" nightly, and what they learned during a day was known to Beaufort before a second day had passed."

He was soon discovered, and that was a leaky secret.

The present duty of the Government is "subjugation, confiniment, and emancipation."

To accomplish these objects we should consider the Constitution again till the close of the war, and then we should have a more consistent Government and a standing army of occupation.

Business in LOUISIANA.—A correspondent writing from New Orleans says:

"I have had the cold blooded assassination of two of our men near Terrebonne Station sixteen days ago. A detachment of rebels, a party of cotton dealers, and all had gone aboard with the exception of one who was returning to Terrebonne Station in the boat which he had left. He was captured, and from that moment his attention was to both in general, and in particular, he became unfeeling, and the consideration he received, which he had given to his wife, his brother, and his own personal friends, led him to an indiscreet, not to say criminal, revelation of his secret plans of future career, and the strength of the party he was with. He was reported as a vain man, and flattery rendered his leaguers, until the whole story was known to the public."

In the mean time the "erring brother" found the means of visiting his "loyal sisters" nightly, and what they learned during a day was known to Beaufort before a second day had passed."

He was soon discovered, and that was a leaky secret.

The present duty of the Government is "subjugation, confiniment, and emancipation."

To accomplish these objects we should consider the Constitution again till the close of the war, and then we should have a more consistent Government and a standing army of occupation.

Business in LOUISIANA.—A correspondent writing from New Orleans says:

"I have had the cold blooded assassination of two of our men near Terrebonne Station sixteen days ago. A detachment of rebels, a party of cotton dealers, and all had gone aboard with the exception of one who was returning to Terrebonne Station in the boat which he had left. He was captured, and from that moment his attention was to both in general, and in particular, he became unfeeling, and the consideration he received, which he had given to his wife, his brother, and his own personal friends, led him to an indiscreet, not to say criminal, revelation of his secret plans of future career, and the strength of the party he was with. He was reported as a vain man, and flattery rendered his leaguers, until the whole story was known to the public."

In the mean time the "erring brother" found the means of visiting his "loyal sisters" nightly, and what they learned during a day was known to Beaufort before a second day had passed."

He was soon discovered, and that was a leaky secret.

The present duty of the Government is "subjugation, confiniment, and emancipation."

To accomplish these objects we should consider the Constitution again till the close of the war, and then we should have a more consistent Government and a standing army of occupation.

Business in LOUISIANA.—A correspondent writing from New Orleans says:

"I have had the cold blooded assassination of two of our men near Terrebonne Station sixteen days ago. A detachment of rebels, a party of cotton dealers, and all had gone aboard with the exception of one who was returning to Terrebonne Station in the boat which he had left. He was captured, and from that moment his attention was to both in general, and in particular, he became unfeeling, and the consideration he received, which he had given to his wife, his brother, and his own personal friends, led him to an indiscreet, not to say criminal, revelation of his secret plans of future career, and the strength of the party he was with. He was reported as a vain man, and flattery rendered his leaguers, until the whole story was known to the public."

In the mean time the "erring brother" found the means of visiting his "loyal sisters" nightly, and what they learned during a day was known to Beaufort before a second day had passed."

He was soon discovered, and that was a leaky secret.

The present duty of the Government is "subjugation, confiniment, and emancipation."

To accomplish these objects we should consider the Constitution again till the close of the war, and then we should have a more consistent Government and a standing army of occupation.

Business in LOUISIANA.—A correspondent writing from New Orleans says:

"I have had the cold blooded assassination of two of our men near Terrebonne Station sixteen days ago. A detachment of rebels, a party of cotton dealers, and all had gone aboard with the exception of one who was returning to Terrebonne Station in the boat which he had left. He was captured, and from that moment his attention was to both in general, and in particular, he became unfeeling, and the consideration he received, which he had given to his wife, his brother, and his own personal friends, led him to an indiscreet, not to say criminal, revelation of his secret plans of future career, and the strength of the party he was with. He was reported as a vain man, and flattery rendered his leaguers, until the whole story was known to the public."

In the mean time the "erring brother" found the means of visiting his "loyal sisters" nightly, and what they learned during a day was known to Beaufort before a second day had passed."

He was soon discovered, and that was a leaky secret.

The present duty of the Government is "subjugation, confiniment, and emancipation."

To accomplish these objects we should consider the Constitution again till the close of the war, and then we should have a more consistent Government and a standing army of occupation.

Business in LOUISIANA.—A correspondent writing from New Orleans says:

"I have had the cold blooded assassination of two of our men near Terrebonne Station sixteen days ago. A detachment of rebels, a party of cotton dealers, and all had gone aboard with the exception of one who was returning to Terrebonne Station in the boat which he had left. He was captured, and from that moment his attention was to both in general, and in particular, he became unfeeling, and the consideration he received, which he had given to his wife, his brother, and his own personal friends, led him to an indiscreet, not to say criminal, revelation of his secret plans of future career, and the strength of the party he was with. He was reported as a vain man, and flattery rendered his leaguers, until the whole story was known to the public."

In the mean time the "erring brother" found the means of visiting his "loyal sisters" nightly, and what they learned during a day was known to Beaufort before a second day had passed."

He was soon discovered, and that was a leaky secret.

The present duty of the Government is "subjugation, confiniment, and emancipation."

To accomplish these objects we should consider the Constitution again till the close of the war, and then we should have a more consistent Government and a standing army of occupation.

Business in LOUISIANA.—A correspondent writing from New Orleans says:

"I have had the cold blooded assassination of two of our men near Terrebonne Station sixteen days ago. A detachment of rebels, a party of cotton dealers, and all had gone aboard with the exception of one who was returning to Terrebonne Station in the boat which he had left. He was captured, and from that moment his attention was to both in general, and in particular, he became unfeeling, and the consideration he received, which he had given to his wife, his brother, and his own personal friends, led him to an indiscreet, not to say criminal, revelation of his secret plans of future career, and the strength of the party he was with. He was reported as a vain man, and flattery rendered his leaguers, until the whole story was known to the public."

In the mean time the "erring brother" found the means of visiting his "loyal sisters" nightly, and what they learned during a day was known to Beaufort before a second day had passed."

He was soon discovered, and that was a leaky secret.

The present duty of the Government is "subjugation, confiniment, and emancipation."

To accomplish these objects we should consider the Constitution again till the close of the war, and then we should have a more consistent Government and a standing army of occupation.

Business in LOUISIANA.—A correspondent writing from New Orleans says:

"I have had the cold blooded assassination of two of our men near Terrebonne Station sixteen days ago. A detachment of rebels, a party of cotton dealers, and all had gone aboard with the exception of one who was returning to Terrebonne Station in the boat which he had left. He was captured, and from that moment his attention was to both in general, and in particular, he became unfeeling, and the consideration he received, which he had given to his wife, his brother, and his own personal friends, led him to an indiscreet, not to say criminal, revelation of his secret plans of future career, and the strength of the party he was with. He was reported as a vain man, and flattery rendered his leaguers, until the whole story was known to the public."

In the mean time the "erring brother" found the means of visiting his "loyal sisters" nightly, and what they learned during a day was known to Beaufort before a second day had passed."

He was soon discovered, and that was a leaky secret.

The present duty of the Government is "subjugation, confiniment, and emancipation."

To accomplish these objects we should consider the Constitution again till the close of the war, and then we should have a more consistent Government and a standing army of occupation.

Business in LOUISIANA.—A correspondent writing from New Orleans says:

"I have had the cold blooded assassination of two of our men near Terrebonne Station sixteen days ago. A detachment of rebels, a party of cotton dealers, and all had gone aboard with the exception of one who was returning to Terrebonne Station in the boat which he had left. He was captured, and from that moment his attention was to both in general, and in particular, he became unfeeling, and the consideration he received, which he had given to his wife, his brother, and his own personal friends, led him to an indiscreet, not to say criminal, revelation of his secret plans of future career, and the strength of the party he was with. He was reported as a vain man, and flattery rendered his leaguers, until the whole story was known to the public."

In the mean time the "erring brother" found the means of visiting his "loyal sisters" nightly, and what they learned during a day was known to Beaufort before a second day had passed."

He was soon discovered, and that was a leaky secret.

The present duty of the Government is "subjugation, confiniment, and emancipation."

To accomplish these objects we should consider the Constitution again till the close of the war, and then we should have a more consistent Government and a standing army of occupation.

Business in LOUISIANA.—A correspondent writing from New Orleans says:

"I have had the cold blooded assassination of two of our men near Terrebonne Station sixteen days ago. A detachment of rebels, a party of cotton dealers, and all had gone aboard with the exception of one who was returning to Terrebonne Station in the boat which he had left. He was captured, and from that moment his attention was to both in general, and in particular, he became unfeeling, and the consideration he received, which he had given to his wife, his brother, and his own personal friends, led him to an indiscreet, not to say criminal, revelation of his secret plans of future career, and the strength of the party he was with. He was reported as a vain man, and flattery rendered his leaguers, until the whole story was known to the public."

In the mean time the "erring brother" found the means of visiting his "loyal sisters" nightly, and what they learned during a day was known to Beaufort before a second day had passed."

He was soon discovered, and that was a leaky secret.

The present duty of the Government is "subjugation, confiniment, and emancipation."

To accomplish these objects we should consider the Constitution again till the close of the war, and then we should have a more consistent Government and a standing army of occupation.

Business in LOUISIANA.—A correspondent writing from New Orleans says:

"I have had the cold blooded assassination of two of our men near Terrebonne Station sixteen days ago. A detachment of rebels, a party of cotton dealers, and all had gone aboard with the exception of one who was returning to Terrebonne Station in the boat which he had left. He was captured, and from that moment his attention was to both in general, and in particular, he became unfeeling, and the consideration he received, which he had given to his wife, his brother, and his own personal friends, led him to an indiscreet, not to say criminal, revelation of his secret plans of future career, and the strength of the party he was with. He was reported as a vain man, and flattery rendered his leaguers, until the whole story was known to the public."

In the mean time the "erring brother" found the means of visiting his "loyal sisters" nightly, and what they learned during a day was known to Beaufort before a second day had passed."

He was soon discovered, and that was a leaky secret.

The present duty of the Government is "subjugation, confiniment, and emancipation."

To accomplish these objects we should consider the Constitution again till the close of the war, and then we should have a more consistent Government and a standing army of occupation.

Business in LOUISIANA.—A correspondent writing from New Orleans says:

"I have had the cold blooded assassination of two of our men near Terrebonne Station sixteen days ago. A detachment of rebels, a party of cotton dealers, and all had gone aboard with the exception of one who was returning to Terrebonne Station in the boat which he had left. He was captured, and from that moment his attention was to both in general, and in particular, he became unfeeling, and the consideration he received, which he had given to his wife, his brother, and his own personal friends, led him to an indiscreet, not to say criminal, revelation of his secret plans of future career, and the strength of the party he was with. He was reported as a vain man, and flattery rendered his leaguers, until the whole story was known to the public."

